THE DEATH BELL.

In some parts of Germany, such is the general dread of being buried alive, that a system of precaution against this premature act is in vogue, by which more than one person has been restored to life and friends after being mourned as dead. The plan is for the corpse to be placed in a comfortable apartment, with face uncovered, and with a cord or wire attached to the hands in such a manner that the slightest movement will cause the tinkling of a little bell in an adjoining apartment, where some one is always on the watch till there are either signs of life or decomposition, to give the assurance of hopeless death. This custom has led to some striking scenes and curious revelations; and one of the most remarkable of these we are now about to put on record, as we received it, not long since, from the narrator:

"I had two bosom companions, and we three were nearly always together when our circumstances would permit. We were not alike in scarcely any particular, and for this reason, perhaps, we liked each other all the better. We differed on nearly every point in science, art, literature, philosophy, and religion, and argued every point we differed on.

"On one thing, however, we did agree, and that was the possibility of being buried alive, and the unutterable horror which must attend the subsequent conciousness of the fact. So, in health, we solemnly pledged ourselves that if within reach of one another at the time of the supposed decease of either, the living should faithfully watch by the senseless form till the return of life or the certainty of death.

"My young friend, Adolph Hofer, was the first to go. He was a believer in the immortality of the soul, and the identity of the spirit with that occupying the mortal tenement. Of course we made our arrangements for watching the corpse according to our compact, but without the slightest hope of ever seeing another spark of life in that loved form.

"It was on the second night after the death of Hofer that Carl and I were sitting in an adjoining apartment conversing about the deceased and his religious belief. We had attached a small cord to the fingers of the corpse, and connected it with a little bell close to us, so that we could be warned of any movement, without being obliged to remain beside the body, which, for various reasons, would not be agreeable to us.

"'If his views in regard to a future state are correct,' observed Carl, 'there is no certainty that he may not now be with us, even in this room.'

"'Yes,' returned I, 'if they are correct, which I do not believe. When a man is dead he is dead, at least as far as this world is concerned.'

"'It may fairly be presumed they are based on facts when they cannot be reasonably controverted. If man exists after death as a roving spirit, give me some evidence of it, and then ask me to believe.'

"'And what about ghosts?' said Carl, who was both skeptical and superstitious—and he glanced furtively and timidly around the room as he spoke, as if he had expected to encounter some fearful apparition.

"'Bah!' exclaimed I, contemptuously; 'you know my opinion of ghosts and hobgoblins—that they have no existence, except in the brains of timid fools.'

"At this moment we heard, or rather fancied we heard, a strange noise in the adjoining apartment.

"'What was it?' inquired Carl, in a mild whisper.

"'Nothing,' replied I, rousing myself with a full determination to shake off what I believed to be a foolish fancy. 'Are we men, or children, to get frightened at the noise of a rat?'

"'Hush! hark! I hear something still,' whispered Carl, now fairly trembling with fear.

"'Then if there is anything, we must know what it is,' said I, as I rose and took up the light for the purpose of going to look at the corpse. 'Will you accompany me, or shall I go alone?'

"Carl Heilsten slowly and steadily arose, as one who felt called upon to perform a fearful duty; but he had scarcely got upon his feet when the little bell connected with the dead was rung violently.

"My nervous system never received such a shock before or since. It seemed for a moment as if I was paralyzed. The light dropped from my hands and was extinguished, and great beads of perspiration stood all over me. But I remained inactive only for the time for one to count ten. Reasoning that my friend had come to life and needed my immediate assistance, I hastily procured another light, and merely glancing at Carl, who had fallen back on his seat, white and helpless with sudden fright, I rushed into the apartment of the corpse, expecting to find Adolph living, if not actually sitting up or standing.

"To my utter astonishment, however, I found only the dead form of my friend—cold, rigid, motionless! There was such an inflexible look on the features, that I could not believe there was a single spark of life in the body, and a close examination of the lips and heart proved that there was none in reality. And yet the hands had been moved, and were drawn to one side, but rather as if jerked there by the bell-cord, which was hanging somewhat loose, than as if stirred by an internal power.

"But what had moved the hands and rung the bell? This was the startling mystery. The room was not large, contained no great amount of furniture, and was easily searched. I had just passed the light under the bed and around and behind everything, when Carl appeared at the door, pale, trembling, and covered with cold, clammy perspiration.

"'Is he alive?' he rather gasped than said.

"'No,' I replied, 'nor has there been any life in him since his breath went out.'

"'Merciful God!' he ejaculated, nervously grasping a chair for support, 'what rang the bell then?'

"'That is the mystery I am trying to solve,' said I. 'It is possible there may be some person concealed here.'

"I cautiously opened a door of a long, deep closet as I spoke, in which hung the clothes of the deceased, and went in and examined it thoroughly. No other human being was there, and nothing had been disturbed. There was no other outlet to the room except the door communicating with the apartment in which we had been watching, and the two windows looking out upon a lawn, and the sashes were closed and curtains drawn, showing no signs of recent disturbance. I then re-examined the room, and particularly the bed, without making any new discovery.

"'This is all very strange!' said I, half musingly, and looking inquiringly at Carl—'very strange indeed!'

"'It must have been something supernatural,' he replied, in a hollow whisper; and moving over to the chest in the corner, he sank down upon it. As he did so the sharp click of the spring-lock caused him to spring up as if shot. For a moment or two he stood trembling, and then said, with more nerve:

"'I believe I am a cowardly fool to be scared at everything! I do not fear anything human, though,' he added, 'but this unearthly business unmans me.'

"I now re-examined the corpse to be sure there were no signs of life in it, and found not only death there but the beginning of decomposition. Perfectly sure of this, we went into the other apartment and sat down to wait through the remainder of the night and ponder the mystery. Scarcely were we seated before we fancied we heard dull, muffled sounds in the bedroom, followed by something like a smothered human groan. Carl's teeth now nearly chattered with terror, and I confess I never felt less courageous in my life.—These strange noises only continued for a short time, and gradually died away into silence, after which we were disturbed no more.

"In the course of time our friend was buried, and some time after the funeral we proceeded to open his strong box, or chest, according to his directions. Then it was that our supernatural mystery had a natural but horrible explanation.

"In that chest was the black and decaying corpse of one whom we all knew in life. The following is our conjecture:

"Cognizant of Adolph Hofer's money and jewels, of their place of deposit, and of our mode of watching the dead, he had, on that eventful night, entered the dead-room through a window at an early hour, and concealed himself in the closet till midnight, and then set about his work of robbery. Some accidental noise having alarmed us, as he could tell from our conversation, he had, either in his haste to secrete himself, or intentionally to frighten us still more, rung the bell in the manner stated, and then got into the chest, which had a powerful spring-lock. My friend Carl, by accidentally sitting down on this, had sealed his doom; and his subsequent groans and terrible efforts to burst from his narrow prison were the strange noises which had so disturbed us the second time. The man's death was a fearful retribution, and the discovery of his dead body spoiled an otherwise wonderful ghost story."

THRILLING SCENE.—About half-past eight o'clock yesterday morning the dwelling of William Sautage, on Wight street, between Campau avenue and Chene street, took fire during the absence of all the members of the family, except the young children, who were locked inside while the mother went to a neighbor's. The flames spread rapidly, and before any effort could be made to check their progress the entire building was wrapped in a sheet of fire. The agonized mother rushed into the burning building with the intention of saving her babes, but the smoke and hot air stifled her, and she was compelled to abandon the undertaking. It seemed as though the children must surely perish, so fiercely did the destructive element rage—the flames leaping and curling above the doomed building like a mass of writhing, angry serpents. The mother was in despair, and her screams for help were truly pitiful. Finally a young man, named William Plass, determined to undertake the rescue of the children. Wrapping a wet blanket about his person, he sprang into the building, and groping his way to the kitchen, where they were known to be, he brought them forth in safety. Five minutes' delay would in all probability have sealed their fates, but happily they were uninjured, although their clothing was considerably scorched. The grateful mother could find no words to express her joy to the heroic preserver of her children. —Detroit Free Press.

Romance of a Double Marriage.

The following tale—a sort of Enoch Ardeu romance—is told by the Chicago Post. It concerns one John Edwards, who married at the breaking out of the war, and shortly after enlisted and marched bravely South to escape domestic tyranny at home.

Of course she shed a few tears when he went away, and he very likely did the same. It is a sort of generally entertained sentimental belief that all soldiers are at one time or other the proprietors of popular tears which they wipe away, and that they talk a good deal about their mothers. However that may be in reality, certain it is that if Edward ever did think about his wife he took no steps to let her know it. She came to the conclusion after a time that he was dead. At the same time that this comfortable assurance settled itself upon her mind, another tender appeal was made to her heart. Mr. Edward Walker saw her, was charmed with her, spoke orthodox nonsense to her no doubt, after the usual fashion, offered to take such care of her as had never been taken before, and at the same time promised to be a father to her boy.

He became consequently the husband of the blooming young widow, and the father not only of the boy to whose parentage he had really no very well authenticated claims, but also another cherub, also a boy, who he knew owed his existence to the fact that he and the widow had come to a mutual understanding There was no disagreements between the second husband and the very loving and estimable lady. Everything went on in their household as merry as if there had been a perpetual chime going on in it of marriage bells. They never calculated upon the appearance of an Enoch Arden on the scene. They never thought, perhaps, of the soldier, who, though he was supposed to be respectably and honorably defunct, was, in fact, actually alive. He was happy. He may have called to mind at times certain family reminiscences in connection with the wife and boy, but he did not grieve much about their loss nor make particular inquiries regarding their well being. He invested some money he had in purchasing a goodly farm in this State, and felt himself supremely happy.

Enoch Arden, it will be remembered, when he found that his wife was married, sneaked into the garden, peeped in through the window at her and her miller, saw that they were happy, and his own family was thriving, and then went disconsolately away, and felt miserable until the day he died. The chances are that if he had gone boldly in, seeing how fondly Annie had remembered him for a very long time, and what reverence he was held in by the honest miller, that he would have relinquished her, and perhaps advaneed him a few hundred pounds in order to build a boat and commence business again.

Edwards did not groan at all when happening to come into this city about six months ago he encountered his former wife accompanied by his boy, and the other one who was not his. They stopped, on the contrary, and shook hands. He asked her how she was doing. She informed him how nicely she was situated, and asked him to come and take tea. He went and took tea. The two husbands liked each other immensely.

They smoked sundry pipes together, pipes of peace they were, and both spoke admiringly of their mutual wife. She sat beside them with her two boys beside her, each of the happy little ones conversing at times with their respective fathers, It was one of the pleasantest of pleasant parties. Even the old disputes that had once made the household unhappy were tenderly revived and laughed about, and husband number one took his departure, feeling in his heart as he thought of the very fascinating lady, that husband number two was blessed.

In a short time there came an invitation from number one, for the wife and her little progeny to visit him at his farm. She went, and the children went, and it was the gayest time for all that either had ever enjoyed. The young wife saw no end of amiable qualities in her first husband, and thought that she would like so much to give him another trial. She communicated with husband number two, and he knowing all the circumstances of the case, expressed himself as being in a pleasantly Barkis condition of mind. He was "willin." The whole matter was then speedily arranged. It was agreed that Edwards should take his turn in acceptiag the responsibilities of the family. Both the boys are to be his boys, and the wife to be his wife, and the only formula now to be gone through is the procuring a divorce from husband number two, after which there will be a wedding, and the discarded husband will give away the bride. The whole arrangement is in the highest degree pleasant, and it is especially gratifying to know that both the husbands heartily congratulate each other on the event.

A PRECOCIOUS specimen of Young America got lost at a county fair in New Jersey, and went bawling around, much to the anoyance of some quiet people, who inquired the cause of his grief. He answered with suppressed sobs, "I want my mammy; that's what's the matter. I told the Darned thing she'd lose me."

A SAD CASE.

The Washington Star of November 16th says: A little more than a year ago a young lady in the interior of Pennsylvania, left her home and came to this city in the hope of securing an appointment in one of the Departments. She was urged to this step by the poverty of her parents, and the fact that she was the eldest of six children, and she but seventeen years old. She arrived here with very little money, saved up by teaching, and with no friends in the city. She tried for a long time without success, to get a place, until her money was gone; she could not go home, and alone and friendless, in a strange city, with a month's board due, the poor girl knew not what to do.

In this situation, a good angel, as it seemed to her, in the form of a young man who boarded at the same house, came to her aid. He learned her story, told her he had a sister, and for her sake he would help her: so he advanced her money to pay her board, and promised to aid her in getting a situation. He seemed so good, so gentlemanly, that she placed all confidence in him, In a short time her debts were doubled, she had no situation, and he told her that nothing could be done for her. The girl was nearly crazy; the landlady was threatening, and then she found that Satan indeed could clothe himself in the garb of an angel of light, for the young man took advantage of the power he had gained, and the young girl, driven to desperation, fell. He took her to a remote part of Georgetown, and kept her as his mistress, using threats to prevent her frem seeking help from any one, and compelling her to write to her people that she had at last got a clerkship, on the penalty of being exposed to them and to the world. He soon wearied of her, and deserted her. She sought him out and begged of him to give her just money enough to go home; she would go to her parents, confess all to them, and try to save herself; but the brute spurned her with a curse. Is it a wonder that she commenced a career which could end only in death! Another young man learned of the case, and tried to aid her; he offered her money to go home, but she said it was too late; he then tried to find her parents, but she would not tell their address. She was lost sight of for several months, but a few evenings since a colored boy called on him, and said a dying woman wished to see him. After some hesitation he followed him to a low den in the city, where curses loud and deep resounded, and in a miserable room, upon a bed of straw, lay the poor girl, and dying. She thanked him for his kindness, gave him the address of her parents, and immediately expired. He telegraphed to her father, who came on to take her remains home. With the aid of a few friends, money was given him by the kind youth, and he took her away. It was agonizing to behold the grief of the white haired old man as he bent over his daughter's cold form, calling to her with words of endearment, His heart was almost broken, and he would not be comforted. He did not wish any legal measures instituted against the seducer, so he goes unpunished; nay, more, he moves in the best society, and smiles sweetly upon the daughters of fond mothers, who think him to be a model youth.

HARD ON THE OFFICERS.—The lying down anecdote below comes to us from a re-li-able friend:

Trees, stumps and rocks were sometimes in demand during the progress of a fight. A good lying place (not a lawyer's office) might often be turned into cash. As for instance, a member of Company F, Fourteenth N. C. I., (by the way, the company with which Gov. Vance entered the army as captain,) was giving his friends at home an account of a very fierce fight on the Peninsula. He said: "We were marching through a thick wood to flank a portion of the enemy, and just as we entered the edge of an old field three or four Yankee batteries opened on us at short range, with grape and cannister.—Such a storm I never saw since I was born. The colonel shouted out, 'lie down!' and down we fell quick, but the dirt and gravel flew all over us, and there was not a thing in the world to shield us from the terrible storm, and we had to just lie still and take it."

"Why didn't you get behind a tree?" suggested a deeply interested listener.

"Tree, the devil," said Company F, "there wasn't enough trees for the officers!"

A CHANTICLEER THAT KNEW SOMETHING.—A Democrat in a neighboring rural district says that on the evening of the election, just before six o'clock, the time for closing the polls, he was sitting down to tea, when he told his wife he would go to the city and hear the election news. "It may be bad," said she. "If I thought so I wouldn't go," he replied. Just then an old rooster that spends his nights on a tree close to the house, commenced crowing lustily, and continued for some time. The occurrence was so unusual a one, for a cock to crow when he had just gone to his roosting place, that his wife said, "You need not fear to go; I'll bet the news is good—the old rooster knows it;" and he did go, and was so elated at finding the old cock was right that he did not get home till morning.

Judge Billington was the first man executed for murder in the Plymouth colony.

The first literary production of the English colonists in America was the translation of Ovid's Metamorphosis, by George Sandys, of Virginia.

In 1639 John Hays was elected Governor—the first general election in Hartford.

Samuel Green was the first printer in America, and he first printed the "Freeman's Oath," in Cambridge, Mass

Rev. Thomas Hooker, the first minister in Connecticut, died in 1697, aged sixty-one years. His church was about where the east end of State House Yard now is, and had a thatched roof.

Miles Standish, the hero of New England, died in 1656. A principal branch of his family went to Wethersford, where the family name still flourishes.

Goffe and Whalley, the regicides, arrived in Boston in 1620. The "cave" at West Rock, is only less celebrated in Connecticut than Putnam's wolf den.

Wm. Penn's first treaty with the Indians was in 1682.

Elihu Yale, the benefactor of Yale College, died in England in 1721.

Geo. Whitefield, the celebrated preacher, arrived in this country in 1740.

In 1741 four white persons were executed, thirteen negroes burnt and eighteen hanged for a conspiracy to burn the City of New York.

Benjamin Franklin made his electrical experiments in 1752. Franklin died in 1790.

Peter Randolph, first President of the American Congress, died in 1775.

John Hancock, Henry Laurens, Arthur Lee and Rodger Sherman, died in 1793. In which year four thousand persons died in Philadelphia of yellow fever.

Prof. Waterhouse, of Cambridge, Massachusetts, introduced the inoculation of kine pock into the United States in 1800. Up to that time people were inoculated with small pox, and sent to a "pest house" in some lonely place to take their chances of living or dying from this method of preventing small pox.

In 1789, Dr. Carroll, of Maryland, was consecrated the first Catholic Bishop in America.

PRINTERS.

Journeymen Printers are a restive set of men, who seem ever inclined to change their business and their location, yet they retain a regard for "The Art," which often brings them back to the old trade. We should not be surprised to see Simon Cameron back again in a printing office, or any others of the craft who have acquired wealth or honors in the various pursuits of life. Generally ambitious for "something better than type sticking," and from the nature of the business, usually intelligent, they are fitted to engage in other pursuits of every kind. Probably Congress generally has members, like Colfax and Cameron, who graduated from the printing office; other legislative bodies always have more or less ex-printers among their members. The army and navy has many printers among the officers and the privates. They enter all the learned professions, in short they are found everywhere in all walks of life. The desire and the ability to do better than to work at the trade, is so great that the large majority of those who learn it, leave the business in early life, so that it is somewhat rare to find an old man working in a printing office.

We were lately thinking of our former mates in B. L. Hamlin's printing office, in N. H., and recounting their history which seemed worthy of mention, Two of the printers in that office left the trade, graduated at Yale College, and were admitted to the bar. Another graduated at the medical college. Another became a wealthy merchant in Boston. One of them is now an editor. Three subsequently owned large printing offices, which they now carry on, and this includes all there were in that office except one apprentice who became a hotel clerk. Among the craft in other offices at that time, one subsequently graduated at the head of his class in Trinity College and is now an Episcopal minister in this county, having recently been the editor of this denominational journal. Two others edited and published the Courier. At one time there were three lawyers, two ministers, two physicians and one prominent school teacher in New Haven, who were ex-printers. We might extend this list further, but enough is stated to show the tendency of typos to "something better than type sticking" If a Biographical Dictionary of Printers should ever be printed, it would be an exceedingly interesting volume to the craft, and not without interest to the public at large.—Bridgeport Standard.

EDITORIAL NOTINGS.

AN adjourned session of the Rump convened in Washington on Thursday last, and notwithstanding the unmistakable rebuke which was administered to the leaders of the radical party in the late elections, the very first act of Mr. Sumner, the bell-wether of the party, was the introduction into the Senate of a bill giving negroes the right to sit on juries in the District of Columbia. There is little doubt but what this measure will be adopted and put in execution in time to place negroes upon the jury before which John H. Surratt will be brought for trial, provided he is ever again forced to go through that ordeal In the House the majority report on the impeachment question was presented on Monday, and it favors the impeachment of the President for what it pleases to term general mal-administration It is thought that the House will adopt this report, and vote articles of impeachment, and that a joint resolution will be introduced suspending the President during trial. Great excitement prevails in political and financial circles in consequence of this movement, and should the latter proposition be sustained it would in all probability lead to serious trouble.

PRAIRIE FIRES continue to rage in nearly all sections of the West. They have been particularly severe in Western and Northern Missouri and Kansas, in very many cases actually devastating entire farms Immense amounts of property have been destroyed. The swamps of Southern Missouri are said to be a mass of fire, and along the Illinois Central Railroad for a distance of one hundred miles the prairies are burning, and in Union county, Illinois, the flames have extended to the woods, which are now burning. No relief is looked for until a heavy general rain falls, of which there is no immediate prospect.

IT is said that the Attorney General has expressed the opinion that Surratt cannot be legally tried a second time for complicity in the assassination of Lincoln, as the Constitution forbids the putting of a man's life in jeopardy more than once for the same offence. It is possible that a new indictment may be drawn up, but it is more likely that the prisoner will be released by Congressional interposition.

THE Union Pacific Railroad is finished to the eastern base of the Rocky Mountains, a distance of five hundred and twenty-five miles west of Omaha. Evans' Pass, thirty miles further, and the highest point between the Atlantic and Pacific, will be reached by January.

NORTHERN white men who settled in the South since the war are making preparations to leave before the negroes get entire control of the government, knowing from what the negroes themselves say, that the lives and properties of white men will not be safe after that event.

WESTON, the pedestrian, left Elkhart, Ind., at 5.05 P. M., on Monday, having made seventy miles in sixteen hours and fifty minutes. He was making his fifth and last attempt to walk one hundred miles in twenty-four hours, and he felt confident of success.

DAVID M. LYLE, Chief Engineer of the Philadelphia Fire Department, was found dead in the central office of the Department on Monday morning last. Heart disease was the cause of his death.

THE Radicals had a majority last year of 10,208 in Minnesota, which has been reduced this year to 5,327, while the proposed negro amendment to the Constitution has been defeated by 1,298.

JEFFERSON DAVIS arrived in Richmond on Friday last, and his trial before the U. S. Circuit Court was to have commenced on Monday, but Judge Chase failed to put in an appearance.

LABRADOR was visited by a hurricane, on the 9th of October, which destroyed more than thirty vessels, and thirty-seven persons perished.

A FUNERAL procession of two thousand men, in sympathy with the Fenians executed at Manchester, took place in London on Sunday last.

MARSHAL O'DONNELL, of the Spanish army, is dead.

THE BANKRUPT LAW.—All who contemplate availing themselves of the benefits of the Bankrupt Law must do so previous to March 2, 1868, as the fifty per cent. clause takes effect on that day. All claims against a bankrupt who applies after next March will, as a matter of course, be proven. Section 33 of the law, in relation to the fifty per cent., is as follows: "And in all proceedings in bankruptcy, commenced after one year from the time this act shall go into operation, no discharge shall be granted to a debtor whose assets does not pay fifty per cent. of the claims against his estate, unless the assent, in writing, of a majority in number and value of his creditors, who have proved their claims, is filed in the case, at or before the time of application for discharge."

The Beauties of Negro Rule.

The attempt now making to Africanize the South has turned the attention of the white men of this country to the results of similar experiments in other countries. In this connection, the New York Herald, in the course of an article showing how the Radical theory of reconstruction is making a combination of Hayti and Jamaica in the South, says:

In Hayti we have nothing but a war of races since its discovery by Columbus From the negro Emperor, Jacques I, in 1804, to the present ruler, Salnave, the Haytien part of the island has presented even a worse condition than that which is presented in the long years of wholesale Spanish murders which made its horrors a proverb. How rapidly the country marches to the primitive barbarism, which is the delight of the negro race, is best shown by the value of the exports just previous to the accession of Jacques I, compared with those of to-day. At that time they reached the large figure of $27,818,000. To-day they are scarcely $8,000,000.

But if Hayti exhibits a sorry argument for negro domination, what does Jamaica show? Since the island was given up to negro rule, its march has been rapid from bad to worse, until to-day one of the finest and formerly one of the most productive of all the West India group lies but a wreck in negro hands. All this has taken place in thirty four years, notwithstanding the efforts of the English government to prevent it. And how of Liberia? Large sums of money, Christian and missionary effort unlimited, have been used to little advantage. The negro there, forced into a hot-house growth, and kept upon the plus side of civilization by a constant white effort, is still far down in the scale. He often runs eastward to his native barbarism, and is only kept inside the bounds of the colony by large contributions to his welfare. We dismiss Liberia as a mammoth negro poor-house.

But Liberia is nothing to the negro poor-house we are establishing in the whole Southern half of the United States. We go into this negro asylum business as we go into everything else in America. We set the whole Northern half of the nation to earning money to maintain the negro. We make huge appropriations for the benefit of the negro. We bury all material progress to embody all our ideas in the progress of the negro. We take no time to legislate upon our ruined commerce, for we are occupying every moment for the negro. We approach a financial panic, but try to hide it by holding before it the negro.

We reconstruct the South, not for the common benefit of the white and black relative to the whole nation, but entirely for the negro. The Radicals go so far that—vide Ben. Wade—they say that we may have a war of caste, and even hound on the negro. We have gone negro mad; and the madness threatens to wind up by a war of races which, when it comes, will sweep the negro out of existence. The nation is not powerful enough, with all its vigor, to stand under the negro load. We must shake it off, or down we go to the level of Hayti, San Domingo and Jamaica.

MacShane on his Travels.

Dear Freeman—Returning from the Central Park to the centre of business, you take the Fifth Avenue. This thoroughfare, which is little more than an extension of Broadway, is the most aristocratic in New York. The buildings are mostly brown stone, and each succeeding one an attempted improvement on the last. For miles, beginning near Union Square and extending to the Central Park, is a constant succession of these palatial residences.

Conspicuous above all other buildings, from its immense size, is the new Catholic Cathedral, the largest church edifice in the United States. It is slowly progressing towards completion. Not far distant (sad contrast!) is the splendid abode of Madame Restell, the famous abortionist. The exterior appearance of this dwelling can only be exceeded, as we were informed, by the extravagance of its furniture.

Nearer Broadway is the marble palace of A. T. Stewart, the wealthiest merchant in the United States, perhaps in the world. The lot was formerly owned by Townsend, of Sarsaparilla memory, who undertook the erection of a splendid brown stone residence, but failed to complete it. The property afterwards passed into the hands of Mr. Stewart, who, to make the triumph of dry goods over patent medicines as marked as possible, raised it to the ground and on its foundation commenced the erection of a princely mansion of pure white marble, which is now nearly completed. In magnificence it is intended to far excel any private residence in Gotham.

The stream of travel on the lower portion of Broadway is such as to render it hazardous to attempt to cross the street. To obviate this difficulty, the experiment has been successfully tried of throwing a very high bridge across the street, directly below the Park, and thus pedestrians are enabled to cross, if not with speed, at least with safety.

But other duties press upon me, and I must bring this epistle to an abrupt conclusion. In my next I shall endeavor to "do" New York more in detail.

MACSHANE.

A SAD STORY.—The Elkader (Iowa) Journal tells a mournful story about a young fellow in Clayton county, named Money, who was lately tempted by poverty to steal a yoke of oxen, which he sold at McGregor. His object was to secure money enough to enable him to remove with his family to Missouri. After selling the oxen he started with his wife for Stoughton, Wisconsin, but his crime came out; he was pursued, arrested, and brought back, but his wife went on to her destination in ignorance of why he had to return. Time ran on and he had to tell her the facts. When she read his letter, and the truth broke upon her, it broke her heart,

Terrible Railroad Catastrophe.

The Cincinnati Enquirer furnishes the following particulars of a horrible accident which occurred on the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad, on Thursday last:

THE CAUSE OF THE DISASTER.

The pilot on the engine of a freight train broke down about a quarter of a mile beyond Lockland, and a short time previous to the regular time of the arrival at that station of the Atlantic and Great Western express train. A flagman was immediately sent back, who succeeded in stopping the above cars; but in an interval of sixteen minutes it was known that the accomodation train from Hamilton was due. Conductor Sliter, of the express train, immediately dispatched a messenger with the warning signal to intercept the Hamilton train, which comprised twelve baggage and two passenger cars. He met the train about a third of a mile from the bridge, where the disabled engine of the baggage train was being repaired. At that particular point there is a curve in the road and a descending grade, but the signals being at once observed, the engine was reversed, the men sprang to the brakes, and (we are informed upon reliable authority,) every means and appliance were put forth to stop the train. This was at fifteen minutes to six; the morning was damp and foggy, and the misty atmosphere had made the rails wet and slippery. The engine was reversed, and the men strained every nerve at the brakes, but in vain; onward sped the ill-omened train, the heavy freight cars upon the down grade bearing onward the belching, fiery engine until the collision being inevitable and hopeless, the engineer and fireman sprang from the fatal contact.

THE CATASTROPHE.

At this time the passengers in the sleeping-cars of the express train, having been notified that they were within twelve miles of Cincinnati, had arisen and were making preparation for their arrival in the city. At Dayton the train had been augmented with three cars from the Dayton and Michigan Railroad, consisting of a baggage, passenger and sleeping-car. In this latter were four sisters, named Sallie, Rachel, Anna and Mary Morgan, Southern ladies, and residents of New Orleans—but more of this anon. They were dressed and were anxiously awaiting the arrival at the depot, when, through the foggy atmosphere, the reflections of the Hamilton train, was seen in fearful proximity. Too late to escape, onward it came, and then the terrible, the fearful and inevitable crash.

THE CONFLAGRATION.

The destruction-dealing Franklin plunged, ploughed and tore its way half through the ill-fated sleeping-car wherein the unfortunate sisters were quietly awaiting the termination of their journey. In an instant there arose a terrible scream. The cars in front were huddled together, crashing and tearing into each other, while the occupants were tumbling and escaping from them in the wildest confusion.

The catastrophe occurred at a spot where the road was elevated, and upon each side there is an abyss of some twenty feet. Each passenger car—six in number—four belonging to the Eastern train, and the two connected with the Dayton and Michigan road, were shivered, or, as a gentleman in one of the forward express cars stated to us, the leading passenger car encased that in which he was like a telescope.

Meanwhile, the lamp, filled with kerosene oil, which illuminated the reflector of the Franklin, exploded, scattering a fiery fluid around, and in an instant the whole was enveloped in flames. Here the scene was terrific—those who were fortunate to escape from the doomed train little recked the precipitous embankments, and it was indeed a rush for life; but in the car in the rear there was a tragedy enacted which curdles the blood to think of. As the engine of the Hamilton accommodation train scattered death and destruction around, the death screams of the four ill-starred sisters were heard.

But one, however, was seen at the window, head, arms and bosom protruding, in a struggling effort to free herself from the horrible fate. One strong man sprang to her rescue and grasped her shoulders—in vain. Two more, incited by his example, and notwithstanding that the flames were licking the side of the car and belching from the windows, rushed to her aid—still in vain. It seemed as if their united efforts would pull her fragile body in twain. "For God's sake save me," she shrieked, but the neither extremities were so jammed that they could not extricate her. The flames played above her head and settled upon her luxurious hair.

Another fearful struggle and they burst forth from the aperture, and her would-be preservers fell backward; a last agonized scream, and all was hushed save the hissing of the steam, the roar of the fire and the subdued hum of the horrified spectators.

About this time a young man, whose surname we have learned was Jackson, from Boston, Massachusetts, and who had escaped from one of the forward cars, made his way into that occupied by the sisters with the heroic intention of saving them from the fiery ordeal, but he fell a victim to his chivalric spirit, and his charred remains tell the sorrowful tale of his sad, but heroic fate.

—The belief is quite general that Weston, the pedestrian, is in league with one or more parties who have staked large sums of money against his accomplishing the one-hundred-mile feat, and that he will receive more money by failing in it than he would otherwise. One rumor is that John Morrissey had made a bet of $100,000 that Weston would not do it, and that he is to give Weston $20,000 in order that he may win $80,000. There are strong evidences that he might have made the one hundred miles either in the first or second trial if he had been so disposed.

RUMORS are rife in London that the United States government has proposed to buy the interest of the Hudson's Bay Co. [illegible] letter disclosing the facts

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—A wild turkey weighing 19 pounds was killed in Juniata county recently.

—Three convicted Fenians, Allen, Larkin and Gould, were executed in Manchester, England, on Saturday last.

—Official returns from all but three counties in Minnesota give the Rads 5,500 majority and defeat negro suffrage by 1,000.

—The Democratic gain in the State of Wisconsin by the last election is a little over 2,000. They also make some gains in the State Legislature.

—When the ladies at the Court of Sweden got through hugging and kissing Admiral Farragut, they each and all exclaimed—"farry goot."

—One of the negro delegates to the Virginia Convention stole a horse and rode to the election in style. The Convention will miss him, as he is now in jail.

—A couple of female practical jokers frightened a young married woman into insanity, at Milwaukee, the other day, by telling her that her husband was dead.

—Six burglars worked four hours, on the night of the 5th, to open the safe of the Treasurer of Lake county, Ohio. If they had been successful they would have got nine dollars.

—Doesn't it look like humbug that in every State where they control through a free ballot, the Radicals repudiate the negro? Even in Kansas, settled by New Englanders, the vote for woman exceeded that for negro suffrage.

—Dispatches from Rome announce, that the Holy Father, in accordance with the advice of France, has ordered the release of all the Garibaldians, who were taken prisoners by the Pontifical forces during the late campaign.

—An old man named Jacob Rudisill was killed on the Pennsylvania railroad, at Dillerville, on Thursday afternoon. At the time of his death he was gathering coal along the track, and was struck by the Columbia accommodation train and instantly killed

—The Pope, who at first was strenuously opposed to any conference whatever for the settlement of the Roman question, has at length withdrawn his objections, and is in full accord with the proposition of Napoleon. The Government of Bavaria has signified its acceptance of the French plan.

—The long uncertainly as to the fate of Dr. Livingstone is happily terminated by the announcement that at the date of the latest trustworthy advices from the interior of Africa he was safe and well, pursuing his explorations of the wastes of Africa hundreds of miles from the sea coast.

—The town of Winchester, in Litchfield County, Ct., puts the pauper whites of the town up at auction, once a year, to the man who will feed and keep them at the lowest price! and the way they are "kept," it is said, would breed a revolution on a Southern plantation in twenty-four hours.

—Some inhuman monster in Wethersfield, Henry county, Illinois, last week left her infant in a stable, expecting it to be found and adopted. Directions were pinned to the baby's dress, also a five dollar greenback. The child was deposited in such an obscure place that it was not found until it had perished of starvation.

—A Texas editor noticing Ben. Butler's argument in favor of paying the Government bonds in greenbacks, says:—He knows that to pay such an enormous debt in coin would cause such a raking and scraping after the precious metals as might endanger his collections of spoons. The inference is very unkind, but may be true.

—A new Radical paper is to be started at Harrisburg, for the reason that those now published there are not "black" enough. It is to be named the "State Guard," and one of the proprietors will be the present Secretary of Gov. Geary. Would it not be more descriptive of the character of the paper to call it the "State Black Guard?"

—A diminutive negro about fifty years of age, living in Frogtown, southwest of the capitol, Washington, well known to many of the residents of that locality as "Jeff," and who is an indefatigable plasterer and whitewasher, is now living with his third wife, and has been the father of thirty children. Of the thirty all were boys, with one exception.

—A young man in Machias, Me., was caught in the act of smuggling liquor and selling it in a black bag, selling a bottle of brandy for $1.50. He was sentenced to jail for thirty days and fined $10. The Justice took the black bag, saying he would pour it out in his back yard, but a self-constituted committee, who visited the premises next day, "couldn't smell it."

—The hurricane which swept over the West Indies on the 29th ult, was the most destructive in the memory of man. On the Island of Tortola not a house is left standing. The plantations were swept bare, and hundreds of lives were lost. On St. Thomas and other islands the destruction of property and life was very great—too great to form any estimate at present.

—The editor of the Wheeling Register has been shown a newly laid hen egg, with the letters "C. O. D." plainly visible on its side. The egg was laid by a hen owned by Mr. Stockton, Agent of the Adams' Express Co., in that city. The letters are raised on the shell of the egg, and are as plain and legible as if they had been marked by one of Mr. S.'s clerks. The egg can be seen at the express office

—The Cleveland photographer, Gregory, who was found dead in his rooms with his throat cut, a few mornings since, committed the suicidal act himself, after first shooting his female assistant, Isabella Roy. Jealousy, domestic troubles and a passionate temper were the prime causes of the crime. Some time previously his wife had been compelled to have him arrested and fined for abuse and threats, which, in addition to the fact that the girl, with whom he was holding criminal relations, intended to leave him to marry a young man, produced in him a state of mind reckless enough for the commission of such a revolting double crime. A Library of Universal Information

THE NEW

AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA:

A Popular Dictionary of General Knowledge.

EDITED BY

GEO. RIPLEY AND CHAS. A. DAY,

Aided by a numerous select corps of writers in all branches of Science, Art and Literature!

In 16 large volumes, 8mo.

750 double-column pages in each volume.

The leading claims to public consideration which the new American Cyclopædia possesses may be thus briefly stated:

"1. It surpasses all other works in the fullness and ability of the articles relating to the United States.

"2. No other work contains so many reliable biographies of the leading men of this and other nations In this respect it is far superior even to the mere bulky Encyclopædia Britannica.

"3. The best minds in this country have been employed in enriching its pages with the latest data, and the most recent discoveries in every branch of manufactures, mechanics, and general science.

"4. It is a library in itself, where every topic is treated, and where information can be gleaned which will enable a student, if he is so disposed, to consult other authorities, thus affording him an invaluable key to knowledge.

"5. It is neatly printed, with readable type, on good paper, and contains a most copious index.

"6. It is the only work which gives any thing approaching correct descriptions of cities and towns of America, or embraces reliable statistics showing the wonderful growth of all settions"

Every one that reads, every one that mingles in society, is constantly meeting with allusions to subjects on which he needs and desires further information. In conversation, in trade, in professional life, on the farm, in the family, practical questions are continually arising, which no man, well read or not, can always satisfactorily answer. If facilities for reference are at hand, they are consulted, and not only is the curiosity gratified, and the stock of knowledge increased, but perhaps information is gained and ideas are suggested that will directly contribute to the business success of the party concerned.

A Cyclopædia is pre eminently the work of our country and generation. This is the age of steam. No one has time to grope among a hundred different works for every little fact required, without the certainty of finding it at last. With a Cyclopædia embracing every conceivable subject, and having its topics alphabeticaly arranged, not a moment is lost The matter in question is found at once, digested, condenced, stripped of all that is irrelevant and unnecessary, and verified by o comparison of the best authorities. Moreover, while only men of fortune can collect a library complete in all the departments of knowledge, a Cyclopædia, worth in itself for purposes of reference at least a thousand volumes, is within the reach of all—the clerk, the merchant, the professional man, the farmer, the mechanic. In a country like ours, where the humblest may be called to responsible positions requiring intelligence and general information, the value of such a work cannot be over-estimated.

LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.

JOHNSTOWN, Nov. 25, 1867.

Dear Freeman—The wife of our townsman, Mr. John Brady, met with a painful and serious accident on Tuesday last. She had started up stairs with the youngest child in her arms, and when about half way to the landing, she missed her footing, and falling backwards, fractured one of her limbs just below the knee, and also sprained her ankle. Fortunately she succeeded in preserving the child from injury. Medical aid was promptly summoned and the broken limb properly adjusted, but owing to the serious nature of her injuries she is now lying in a critical condition. This is a severe affliction to Mr. Brady's family, and it is rendered more poignant by the fact that he himself has been suffering from a fractured limb ever since the terrible accident at the station in this place, last September a year, from which he had only sufficiently recovered to enable him to visit his relatives on the mountain on the very morning of the day his wife was so severely injured.

A man named Russell, a resident of Conemaugh station, met with an accident one day last week, by falling from the trestle work at that place. His head and shoulders first came in contact with the ground, and his injuries are of such a nature as will confine him to bed for some time. Mr. R. had just recovered from an accident received on the railroad some months ago.

Still another individual was arrested last week for displaying belligerent propensities in a beer saloon in Conemaugh borough, and for flourishing a loaded revolver in a threatening manner. Complaint was entered, and the police took him to durance on a charge of surety of the peace. He will have a hearing to-day.

There is some prospect of the outlaw Thompson being caught soon, as a party who were in search of him traced him to M'Connellsburg, where, getting wind of the pursuit, he stole a horse in the neighborhood and rode back in this direction. The shadow of his crime, Nemesis like, pursues him, and it would seem as if some unaccountable fascination ever leads him back to the vicinity of the commission of his awful offence. During the past two weeks he has been seen at various times at Stoystown, Laughlinstown and Latrobe, and although recognized, no one seems to have had the temerity or hardihood to attempt to arrest him. There is a party now on his track, however, who will most certainly capture the desperado.

The individual who was sent up last week for the robbery at Mr. M'Creight's, was certainly a genius in his way. During the night he committed the felony he was enjoying Mac's hospitality, and it is probable that his ruminations were principally confined to meditating upon the handsome figure he would be likely to cut in his host's best suit of wearing paraphernalia. Be that as it may, he rose from his bed and proceeded to don the aforesaid suit. His next move was to fob a valuable gold watch, likewise the property of Mr. M'C. At this stage of his proceedings it doubtless occurred to him that he had a lady friend, mayhap his "affinity," who would be gratified in being made the recipient of some new "togs." So a bundle of Mrs. Mac's wearing apparel was hastily selected, and the young man then took his departure. As soon as his peculations became known pursuit was made.—Mr. M'C. had a suspicion that the young man would make for Indiana county, so taking the train west, he was very agreeably surprised to see the purloiner enter the same car at New Florence. All the stolen property, except Mrs. M'C.'s clothing, was recovered.

Johnstown has been enjoying a decided sensation the past two weeks, which consists in nothing more nor less than a veritable perambulating ghost. This ghost does not differ in discription from other ghosts—the orthodox winding sheet and accompaniments being sported in regular ghost of Hamlet and Banquo, or famous "Cock Lane," style. His ghostship appeared the other evening to a lady residing in the Second Ward, and the appearance was so terrifying as to produce convulsions. A little girl residing near the point also got a view of it, and thereupon immediately fainted. A gentleman in the same locality was horrified, a few evenings after, to see the "ghost" glide into his house, and as he did not feel very courageous, he "turned tail and ran." It is proper to remark that when he came back with reinforcements the ghost was non est, as likewise several loaves of bread, etc., from his cellar. The ghost has evidently a "taking way" with it, for clothes-lines and cellars have experienced mysterious disappearances, in the shape of "washing's" stretched out on the former, and eatables from the latter. The "ghost" does not confine his visitations to any particular quarter, but roves 'round promiscuously. The individual whom it is supposed is thus playing upon the superstitions and credulity of the weak-minded is "spotted," and if caught by the party who are anxious to see the ghost, an ounce of lead will give him an opportunity of solving the mysteries connected with the land of shadows.

The scaffolding has been removed from the spire of the new M. E. Church, and it is certainly the neatest affair of the kind in this section of the country.

The slating of the new School House is also about completed, and the gravel roofing of Messrs Frazer and Montgomery's handsome new block, on the corner of Main and Franklin streets, was last week finished.

SKU BAL.

AN AWFUL ACCIDENT.—We are pained to learn that a most distressing accident occurred at Wilmore, this county, on Tuesday morning. Henry Martin was instantly killed by a ball from a rifle in the hands of Valentine Maltzi. Of course the whole affair was purely accidental. Mr. Maltzi is suffering the keenest anguish in consequence of the sad occurrence. The deceased was a man of family, and had but recently moved to Wilmore. He was employed on the railroad repairs near that place.

CASUALTY.—Mr. Phillip Hagg, late of Chest township, met with a severe injury on Saturday last. A portion of the machinery at which he was at work flew from its place and struck him with such force as to fell him to the earth. Medical attendance was soon procured, and we learn that Mr. Hagg is recovering. The accident occurred at a saw mill, a mile or two from Wilmore.

NOT ANY.—We don't advise anybody to chew or smoke, but to all who are addicted to the weed, we have no hesitation in recommending the brands of cigars and tobacco kept by Cham. Roberts. If there are any better in town we have failed to sample them.

NONE BETTER.—Ladies on a shopping expedition will look in vain for a more superb or varied assortment of goods than is displayed on the shelves of Messrs. Mills & Davis. A fine stock at low prices is the inducements they offer.

A TAN colored baby, about six weeks old, was found on the street, in Hollidaysburg, on Monday night. A negro found it, and as it is of the proper color, he will adopt it.

COMMUNICATIONS.

CARROLL TP., Nov. 25, 1867.

To the Editor of the Freeman—I regret that you lent the columns of your paper to a certain A. D. Criste for the purpose of singling me out as one of the Board of Poor House Directors, and must avail myself of the same columns as a medium of reply. Having no personal hostility to any man living, having endeavored to live at peace with all men, and having conscientiously discharged my duty, under my oath, as Poor Director, I am quite at a loss to conceive why I should be singled out from the whole Board as the object of personal abuse. Let me say a few words in reply:

In the first place let me assure you that I have no objection that the world shall see and know every transaction that occurred at the Poor House since I have been a member of the Board. And the records will show, and I appeal to them, that no other Director has drawn less from the public treasury than I have, during the year that I have been a member.

It is false, then, in the first place, that the Board ever visited Johnstown at my instance. It was proposed by my seniors, shortly after I became a member, that a visit to Johnstown, for the purpose of arranging the pay of out door paupers, employing a regular physician, and other matters, would be advantageous to the county, and I submit to my colleagues whether it was not so. We received barely enough to cover our expenses, and that amount was suggested by others, and not by myself. As to the pitiful falsehood that the "party went upon a regular spree." I leave my colleagues to answer. To those who know me, no contradiction is necessary, so far as I am concerned.

The other charge is that I signed an order for a friend for upwards of Forty Dollars. The friend alluded to is a certain Irvin Rutledge—a man whom I had never seen before. The Poor House train went to the station for my colleague, Mr. Orris, and I went along to meet the train. Irvin Rutledge was with him, and stayed all night at the Poor House. I never had a word of private conversation with him in regard to any bill or order for it. It is not my purpose to say whose friend Irvin Rutledge was—he never was a friend of mine, and I had a prejudice against him from having heard that he had an undue influence at the Poor House. Any orders I ever signed for him were made out by the Steward and signed by an older member of the Board first. Being the youngest member of the Board, I deferred very much to the opinions of the older members, and never signed an order that was not filled by the Steward and signed by my seniors, or one of them, if both were not present. I did resist bills presented by Rutledge, and believe I at one time prevented him from getting an order for what I thought an improper bill. These are the two monstrous wrongs I have done to the people, as regards their money.

But this is not what's the matter! I was absent from one meeting of the Board. This frequently happens, and as two Directors form a quorum for business, it does not affect the public interests. But I had a satisfactory reason for not being present at the meeting referred to. I learned that a new Steward would be chosen at that meeting, and I thought it unfair to the people of Cambria county for a Board to choose officers for their successors. The proper course, as I believe, is for every Board to appoint its own officers, as is done by the County Commissioners, and all other bodies of the kind. If a different custom has prevailed in the Poor House, it is a bad one, and I hope we have set a good example for the future.

But A. D. Criste having, by the vote of a living and a dying Director, been appointed Steward, I moved to rescind the appointment for the purpose of making a new one, and he claims that this is without precedent. But it is not. Only a few years since the new Board revoked the appointment of the old Board, and appointed the present Steward; and fortunately, too, as the discarded Steward turned out a murderer and the matron a prostitute.

At the first meeting of the new Board I did what I deemed my duty to the people. I did not know A. D. Christe to be the proper person for the appointment; I never charged him, as he seems to think, with being a "gambler, intemperate, or lazy," nor did I find any fault with his family. I simply treated the question as an open one, doing what I thought my duty, but I confess that, elected by the Democrats, I could hardly, against an equally qualified person, appoint to a position a man who, I was credibly informed, had voted the whole Radical county ticket at the late election.

If paying my commutation for military services to the Government was not sufficient evidence of loyalty to my country, I trust I have partially atoned for it by choosing for Steward one who, while he is neither "a gambler, intemperate, or lazy" has done his part in the army of the Republic—a man who is not only deserving but competent, humane, and honest, and a man who did not seek the Poor House as a plaster to heal his broken fortunes.

But I must stop. I beg pardon for the length of this paper, and my only excuse is, that having never sought or held an office in the county of my birth but the humble position I now hold, I deem the attack upon me unjust, uncalled for, and malicious.

HENRY BYRNE.

CARROLLTOWN, PA., Nov. 21, 1867.

Editor of the Freeman—Dear Sir: I noticed an article in your paper last week, headed in letters quite conspicuous, "Communication," and signed by one having the initials, "R. H. S." No doubt the writer of this letter was prompted by what he considered a good motive when he undertook the task. With all due regard for the author's good intentions while writing this communication, which must, naturally be classed an advertisement, I would respectfully request that he calculate the real worth of all so called physicians who permit their names to used in connection with testimonials of "wonderful cures," which are said to have been performed by them, with the aid of some secret remedy, which, when needed by their duped patient is not known to the U. S. Pharmacopœa or any scientific druggist. Advertising physicians are almost invariably impostors, and always quacks.

To the readers of the Freeman I would say that the communication referred to was neither asked or paid for by me, and of the worthy Editor I would most cordially ask the favor that no further testimonials in my favor be published in the Freeman without my consent. J. J. OATMAN.

JUST AS WELL.—We may as well say here as any where else that V. S. Barker's stock of merchandise is as good as the best, and as cheap as the cheapest, and comprises almost everything required by maid or matron, benedict or bachelor.

AMERICAN WALTHAM WATCHES.—The true value of Machinery applied to Watchmaking is not that by its use Watches are made rapidly, but that they are made correctly. Very few people know a Waltham Watch should be superior to any other. In the first place, at Waltham the Watch is regarded as only a machine, to be constructed like any other machine, on mechanical principles. If the watches are good it is because the machinery is good. Of course there must be no defect in the principle or plan of movement—no mistake in the sizes or shapes of the pieces of which it is composed—nothing wanting in their properties, and no error in their positions. These points once thoroughly settled, it rests wholly with the machinery, constructed with infinite diversity of form and function expressly for the purpose, to produce the finished pieces. By means of multiplying gauges and microscopes, tests and inspection for the detection of wear in the cutting tools, and for faults and flaws in steel and stone are made to accompany the work in every stage from beginning to end. As a necessary result, the watch goes together a perfect machine. Every part is found to fit properly in its place. Every pin may be pushed till it pinches, and every screw turned home. Instead of sluggish and feeble action, the balance, even under the pressure of the lightest mainspring, vibrates with a wide and free motion, and the beat has the clear ringing sound always characteristic of the Waltham Watch. The machine is a timekeeper from the start.

This system of watchmaking is unknown in foreign countries, and is entirely original with the Waltham Company. The Company claim that by it they produce watches that cannot be equalled for every quality which makes a watch valuable. Simple in plan and correct in principle, the movement is not only beautifully finished, substantial, accurate and cheap, but is uniform in the minutest details, not easily damaged, and when repaired always as good as new. There are different grades of finish in the different varieties of watches made by the Waltham Company, as there are different sizes and shapes to suit all tastes and means; but every Watch that bears the genuine trade-mark of "WALTHAM" is guarantied to be a good one, and nobody need be afraid to buy it.—Every Watch fully warranted. For sale by all first-class dealers in the United States and British Provinces. For further information address the Agents, ROBBINS & APPLETON, 182 Broadway, N. Y.

USE THE BEST.—Blades' Euphonial Lubricators are a medical preparation in the form of a Lozenge, and are universally considered the most pleasant, convenient and effectual remedy in use for Hoarseness, Coughs, Colds, Croups, Catarrh, Asthma, Bronchitis, Diptheria, and all Pulmonary Complaints. They are WARRANTED to give quicker and more lasting benefit in the above affections than any other remedy. Also to contain no deleterious ingredient, and not to offend the weakest and most sensitive Stomach.

Blades' Constitution Pills are so called because of their peculiar effect upon the Liver, Stomach, Blood and Nervous System. HORRIBLE ACCIDENT.—A man some time since was repairing a gas leak, corner of 28th Street and 6th Avenue, New York. He went in to the excavation and then lit a match. Dr. Tobias' Venetian Liniment was applied freely, and in three days the man was about his business in the Manhattan Gas Works as well as ever. His name is Samuel F. Waters. This is one of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Tobias' celebrated Venetian Liniment; it is not only good for Burns, but for old Sores, Bruises, Chronic Rheumatism, Sore Throats, Cuts, Insect Stings, Pains in the Limbs, Chest and Back; also internally, for Colic, Cramps, Diarrhœa, Dysentery and Croup. It is perfectly innocent to take internally, and is the best family medicine in the world. Orders are received all over Europe for it. The most celebrated Physicians recommend it—it never fails. IT IS NOT TRUE that R. H. Singer intends leaving town, as some will have it, but, on the contrary, intends to carry on the Blacksmithing, in all its branches, stronger than ever. In order to do this it is necessary to employ workmen and buy tools, iron, etc., all of which cost money. Therefore persons indebted to Mr. Singer for work done in '65, '66 and the early part of '67, are requested to call and settle. He feels confident that his customers will not let him stick. 3t.

MARRIED.

MURRAY—MEEHAN—In Philadelphia, on the 18th inst., by Rev. Father Monahan, Pastor of St. Francis' Church, Mr. M. A. MURRAY and Mrs. ELIZABETH MEEHAN, both of Philadelphia.

We were no less gratified than surprised at the reception of the above news. Mathew holds a prominent position on our list of intimate and esteemed friends, and now that he has taken upon himself the cares and responsibilities of a benedict, we sincerely hope that the comforts, pleasures and felicities of that happy state may be vouchsafed to him and his without stint or alloy, and that the blessings of a bountiful Providence may attend and cheer them both throughout life.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

RECIPE FOR DIARRHŒA.—Take one teaspoonful of salt, the same of vinegar, and a tablespoonful of water; mix and drink. It acts like a charm on the system, and even one dose will generally cure obstinate cases of diarrhœa or the first stage of cholera. If the first dose does not bring complete relief repeat the dose, as it is quite harmless. The patient should keep perfectly quiet, a reclining posture being best. In severe cases soak the feet thoroughly in very warm water, chafing them well. Flannel wet with warm water, vinegar and salt (especially in warm weather) and placed around the loins, wrapping warm flannel over it, is an excellent aid to recovery. Any and every one can apply these remedies without a physician, running no risk, and will be astonished at the beneficial result. They should be universally known.

A CURE FOR CHILLS.—About two years since, says the Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer, we stated that a citizen of this vicinity had told us that he had broken and cured a spell of chills and fever by the use of pure apple vinegar—drinking about a wine-glass full at a time, at intervals before the time for the return of the chill. The Rome (Ga.) Courier reports cures by the same course in its neighborhood. It says that a lady friend has known this recipe to be used in many cases, and has never known it to fail in curing chills and fever. "Take a wineglass full of the best apple vinegar for nine mornings in this way: Take it three successive days, then omit it three days, and so on until the vinegar has been taken nine mornings in all. The vinegar must be a first rate article of apple vinegar."

WINTER EVERGREENS.—A beautiful and easily attained show of evergreens may be had by a very simple plan, which has been found to work remarkably well on a small scale. If geranium branches taken from luxuriant and healthy trees, just before the winter sets in, be cut as for slips, and immersed in soap water, they will, after drooping a few days, shed their leaves, and put forth fresh ones, and continue in the finest vigor all winter. By placing a number of bottles thus filled in a flower basket, with moss to conceal the bottles, a show of evergreen is easily secured for the winter. All the different varieties of the plant being used, the various shapes and colors of the leaves blend into a beautiful effect. They require no fresh water. So says a lady who has tried it.

MINCED MUTTON.—This is a very useful preparation of "cold mutton," and will be found excellent for a change. Cut slices off a cold roasted leg of mutton, and mince it very fine; brown some flour in butter, and moisten it with some gravy; add salt and pepper to taste, and let it simmer about ten or fifteen minutes, to take off the raw taste of the flour; add another lot of butter and some parsley chopped fine, then add the minced meat, and let it simmer slowly, but not boil, or the meat will be hard.

A CHEAP FAMILY PUDDING.—One pound of flour, one pound of suet chopped fine, three-quarters of a pound of molasses or sugar, one pound each of carrots and potatoes well boiled and mashed together, half a pound of raisins, three-quarters of a pound of bread crumbs; spice, flavoring and peel optional. Mix the whole together with a little water; it must not be too stiff, and certainly not too moist. Rub a basin well with dipping, and boil for eight hours.

TO REVIVE faded flowers, cut the stalk and hold it a few moments in the flame of the candle, and then set the flower again in the cold water, when it will recover its strength almost visibly after this violent assistance, and blossom immediately.

—When the first schooner ever built on the coast of Massachusetts sailed from her stocks and floated gracefully upon the water, the chance exclamation of an admiring bystander, "Oh, how she scoons!" drew from her contriver and builder the answer, "A schooner let her be then," and made a new English word.

MEDICAL PREPARATIONS.

POLAND'S

Magic Billious Powders

This Preparation is the discovery of Rev. J. W. Poland, formerly Pastor of the Baptist Church in Goffstown, N. H., a man dearly beloved by the entire denomination throughout N. England. He was obliged to leave the pulpit and study medicine to save his own life, and his MAGIC POWDERS are the most wonderful discoveries of modern times. It is the GREAT LIVER and BILIOUS REMEDY, which completely clears in the shade all other discoveries in medicine, and it affords him much gratification as they receive the unanimous approbation of all who have tested them. The Magic Billions Powders are a POSITIVE CURE for LIVER COMPLAINT in its most aggravated form, and an immediate corrector of BILIOUS DERANGEMENTS. Excellent for Headache, Constipation, Pimples, Biliousness, Sallow Skin, Drowsiness, Dizziness, Palpitation, Heartburn, and a most wonderful

Cure and Preventative of Fever & Ague.

(We advise all who are troubled with fearful malady to always keep the Powders on hand ready for immediate use.)

Here are a few important particulars—1st. They are the great specific for Bilious Affections. 2d. They are the only known remedies that will cure Liver Complaint. 3d. They are the only known remedy that will cure Constipation. 4th, The Powders are so thorough in their operation that one package will be all that the majority of those using them will require to effect a cure. 5th. They are a mild and pleasant yet the most effectual cathartic known. 6th. They are the cheapest and best medicine extant, as they can be sent by mail to any part of the globe for the price, 50 cents.

Circulars, containing certificates, information, etc., sent to any part of the world free of charge. ☞ Sold by all Druggists, or sent by mail on application to

C. G. CLARK & CO., Gen'l Agents.

Price, 50 Cts. per Box. NEW HAVEN, CT.

COE'S DYSPEPSIA CURE.

This great remedy for all DISEASES OF THE STOMACH is the discovery of the inventor of Coe's valuable Cough Balsam, while experimenting for his own health, and cured Cramp in the Stomach for him which had before yielded to nothing but chloroform. The almost daily testimony from many parts of the country encourage us to believe there is no disease caused by a disordered stomach it will not speedily cure. Physicians endorse and use it. Ministers give testimony of its efficacy; and from all directions we receive tidings of cures performed.

Dyspepsia it is sure to cure. Headache, one dose will cure. Sick Headache is cured in hundreds of cases. Heartburn, Dizziness it stops in thirty minutes. Acidity of the Stomach it corrects at once. Nausea of the Food it stops immediately. Distress after Eating one dose will remove. Chills and Morbus rapidly yields to a few doses. Bad Breath will be changed with half a bottle.

IT IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS!

Its unprecedented success is owing to the fact that it cures by assisting Nature to reassert her sway in the system.

Nearly every dealer in the United States sells it at ONE DOLLAR PER BOTTLE.
